

MAT DAILEY'S HUNT.

DYNAMITE AT COMMENTRY.

It is for Evidence Against Mamie, Not for Miss Lawlor.

Police Apparently Unable to Find the Missing Witness.

Justice Taintor Intimates that the Round-Sman Could Produce Her.

Lizzie Lawlor, the woman whose evidence will either convict or clear Round-Sman Mathew F. Dailey, of the Delancey-street station, of the serious charge made against him by pretty Mamie Hannan, is still missing, although Capt. Eakin's says he is doing his utmost to find her. Dailey's examination on Sunday morning next, and Capt. Eakin's says he hopes to find the Lawlor woman before that time.

roundsman Dailey himself, instead of searching for Miss Lawlor, seems content with trying to blacken the Hannan girl's character.

This conclusion is borne out by his actions yesterday. He was off duty, and visited six stores on Grand street, in the neighborhood of Mamie Hannan's former home, and made inquiries as to her character. He and Patrofman Joseph Lusser, both in full uniform, went into M. Barre's barber shop, at 583 Grand street, and Dailey asked the barber if he could not tell something against Mamie Hannan's character.

Dailey admits this, and says that he told the policemen that the girl lived in a flat-house over his shop a year ago, that she was a little girl then and that, so far as he knew, she was a good girl.

The neighbors about there hold the same opinion of Mamie Hannan, and so do the tenants of the house at 318 Monroe street, where she now lives. So far as is known this is the first time Dailey has assailed Mamie Hannan's character, although he did speak harshly of Lizzie Lawlor, who, Mamie says, was with her the night the assault is alleged to have been made. Joe Lawlor, the missing woman's brother, resented this, and threatened to make Dailey prove his allegations.

The only thing so far discovered against Mamie Hannan's character is that she was Lizzie Lawlor's friend and frequently visited at her flat. Mrs. Hannan, Mamie's mother, says Mamie never stayed over night at Lizzie Lawlor's flat but once. That was just before Easter, and the Lawlor woman's brother and a brother from New Jersey were there. Mrs. Hannan also says that Dailey is better acquainted with her and with the Lawlor woman than will admit.

"I was introduced to him a year ago," she said to an EVENING WORLD reporter, "by Lizzie Lawlor herself. It was at a ball at Wallachs Hall, and he was in full uniform and on duty. I saw him leave Lizzie's gloves in his hand, too, when he left her in front of her house on grand street, where she then lived."

Mrs. Hannan is probably the only person who is making an energetic search for Lizzie Lawlor, for she knows that her testimony is important and she feels that it would corroborate the story told by Mamie. Every night since Dailey's arrest, she has walked the streets that Lizzie Lawlor used to frequent in the hope of getting some trace of the woman, but so far without success.

If the police are not looking for Lizzie Lawlor, it is not Justice Taintor's fault. He sent for Capt. Eakin yesterday and plainly told him that he did not believe the police were working as hard on the case as they ought. The justice also stated that her continued absence was inexplicable, as he had understood that Dailey himself had received a letter from her during the last few days.

A communication to the EVENING WORLD says that fully two-thirds of the policemen in Capt. Eakin's command know the Lawlor woman by sight.

A LEAK IN THE CUSTOM-HOUSE.

Inspectors Think They Have Discovered One in Cigar Importations.

Customs officials are confident that they have unearthed a nest of fraud in the importations of cigars, whereby importers are saving thousands of dollars in duties.

Special Treasury Agents Chancery and Hamilton, of Philadelphia, are in town investigating a case growing out of the seizure in that city of 25,000 Havana cigars consigned to B. Wasserman & Co., of 301 Broadway, which it is alleged has been passed through the New York Custom-House at about two pounds per thousand of cigars less than the proper weight. By this, it is alleged, the importers have saved $10 a thousand in duty.

Attention seems to have been drawn to Wasserman & Co. by the charges of other New York importers that they are underlining the true weight of their packages. The firm's confidential clerk said to an EVENING WORLD reporter to-day:

"It is true that our cigars were sealed, but it is also true that Havana cigars will absorb a great deal of moisture when taken out of the packing-cases in which they are imported. As far as we are concerned everything is all right and we are anxious to go to trial."

The talk in town we believe is merely the result of jealousy on the part of other dealers whom we behold because we ourselves are believed in small fronts and large sums."

Impending Holiday Causes a Light Volume of Business.

Reading and Richmond Terminal Improving.

Bank Statement Assures an Easy Money Market.

WALL STREET, Saturday, May 28.—As was expected, in view of the impending double holiday, business at the Stock Exchange was quite limited this morning. As the session lasted only two hours, many operators did not come to the street at all.

Nevertheless the market was strong in tone and prices advanced 14 to 1 per cent, outside of National Lead, which jumped 12 points.

The bank statement, showing an enormous gain to reserve, stimulated purchases near the close. The ease in money is assured, and it is felt that this must lead to heavy purchases of all kinds of paying investments.

All the leading issues were in better shape today, and Richmond & Terminal improved so much that it is known Mr. Borden, the managing director, is to make a romantic trip to the West next week.
